OHIO SANCTIONS PUTTING BOND ISSUES TO VOTE

Approval Is Last Of Legal Steps Necessary To Assure Ballot

That Circleville will ballot on three bond issues, totalling $31,000, at the Aug. 9 election was assured Saturday when the Ohio Tax Commission approved the three questions. The commission's sanction of the special issues was the last legal step necessary before the questions can be decided by ballot.

The issues are:
Purchase of materials and installation of boulevard lights, $9,000;
Construction of an addition to Berger hospital, $10,000;
Construction of an addition to city hall, $12,000.

The total of $31,000 will be the city's share of the expense, the Public Works administration being asked to share in the construction costs. The total cost of the boulevard lighting system is estimated at $15,000; hospital addition, $18,000, and city hall addition, $21,810.

The boulevard system would include erection of steel or concrete poles in the business district for lights. A contract with the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. for wooden poles and rates for service was rejected by voters several months ago.

The Berger hospital addition would provide more space for maternity cases. The addition, which would be erected on the rear of the institution, would be 55 by 32 feet. No excavation would be needed.

The city hall addition would house a jail, garage and health offices all on one floor. The building, to be on the rear of the present structure would be 75 feet by 48 feet.

BRITAIN'S pick-a-back plane, the Mercury, is shown at Port Washington, N. Y., after completing its maiden flight across the Atlantic from Foynes, Ireland, with one stop at Montreal. The flying boat was tossed from the back of its mother ship at 3,000 feet above Foynes, and completed the 3,042-mile journey in 22 hours and 28 minutes flying time. The Mercury brought a shipment of London newspapers and newsreels. For the first time in history London newspapers were on sale in New York the day after they rolled off the press in London. Above are the Mercury's crew, Capt. Donald C. T. Bennett, left, and A. Coster. New York and the U. S. government immediately prepared to give them honor.

Juicy Tropical Air Mass Draws Blame for Rains

A tropical air mass, four miles deep in places and "dripping" with moisture, was blamed by the weather bureau today for the incessant rains over Pickaway county and host of the United States during the last week.

The warm, moist air has been stagnated over large areas, bureau officials said, and there are no prospects of change within the next few days.

RUSSIA ADDS TO FORCES AT HILL

Moscow Gives No Sign Of Bowing Before Demands Of Japanese

TOKYO, July 23.—(UP)—News-papers reported today that Russia was continually increasing its forces in the neighborhood of the hill on the Siberia-Manchukuo-Korea frontier which has caused the latest dangerous Japanese-Russian incident.

Some dispatches expressed the opinion that the Russians might withdraw within a few days, as Japan demands. But others were more pessimistic, particularly because a party of Japanese and Manchukuan messengers, sent to negotiate with the Russians on the spot, had not returned.

For the moment, newspapers confined themselves mostly to publishing dispatches from the frontier without trying to anticipate the next move by the government as the result of Russia's refusal to withdraw her troops.

PRIME MINISTER TAKES NEW STEP IN PEACE PLAN

London And Paris Expected To Get Best Possible Terms For Minority

TENSION IS LESSENING

Lasting Improvement Seen As Result Of Recent Conferences

LONDON, July 23.—(UP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain has sent Adolf Hitler a personal message expressing the government's desire for improvement of British-German relations and urging him to be moderate in his policy toward Czechoslovakia, it was understood today.

There seemed reason to believe that Chamberlain intimated that Britain and France were using their full influence with the Czechoslovak government to insure the best possible terms for the German minority in Czechoslovakia, and added that the British government would regard a peaceful settlement of the Czechoslovak problem as offering real hope for resumption of British-German friendship talks.

Messageelayed

The message was given by Chamberlain to Herbert Von Dirksen, German ambassador, yesterday during a 45-minute talk they had before Dirksen left for a vacation in Germany.

The result of developments in the last few days was that British-German relations, long strained, had taken a decided turn for the better.

Nevertheless an authoritative source warned against what was called extreme optimism expressed in some quarters, and commented that of the many rumors circulating as to developments, 99 percent were wrong.

A responsible informant summed up the situation as follows:

"No harm has been done by recent talks and there is a fair likelihood that they may ultimately result in lasting improvement."

Crisis Still Possible

But the same source said that 1) a serious crisis might still boil up in Czechoslovakia during August and 2) that there was still a huge gap between the German minority demands and the concessions which the Czechoslovak government was prepared to offer.

Germany's recent tone of moderation was regarded here as the most favorable factor in a still tense situation, the informant said.

As regards specific reports, a most authoritative source said that (Continued on Page Eight)

DOUG CORRIGAN RECOVERS FROM WEEK OF STRAIN

DUBLIN, July 23.—(UP)—Douglas Corrigan, America's champion wrong-direction trans-atlantic aviator, slept until 11 a. m. today and, after a light breakfast, announced that he had recovered from the effects of a week of strain.

Retiring last night Corrigan announced that he was going to sleep until further notice. He was so tired that he could not attend a carnival in the Irish national boxing stadium.

It was not the flight that tired Corrigan, or the writing of dozens of post cards, or the entertainment programs. He said that he felt the strain of being a hero 1—when 200 girls mobbed him yesterday as he came out of a tailor shop and tried to kiss him; 2—when his $900 airplane was loaded onto the steamship Lehigh Thursday to precede him to New York. A wing of the plane was severely jarred but proved to be undamaged.

Physician Dares Death To Aid Injured Youth

GOWANDA, N. Y., July 23.—(UP)—Rescuers, summoned by telephone, reached a cliff overlooking the Zoar valley four miles east of here last night just as a thunderstorm broke. Flashes of lightning disclosed the form of Walter Stoll, 18, lying 300 feet below. He had fallen; his skull had been fractured.

The cliff's wall was steep and studded with sharp rocks. It would have been a hazardous descent even in daytime. As the rescuers looked down, a driving rain started. Slippery footing instantly became a new peril. But the youth needed attention quickly, so Dr. Norris Frank of Collins Center volunteered.

The others held ropes but they were of little use to the doctor as he clambered down. He clawed at the rocks, slipped and almost fell a dozen times, tore his clothes and scratched his hands and arms. Thunder rolled; lightning flashed. After several minutes—and what seemed hours to the men on the cliff—he reached the bottom.

He administered a hypodermic to the injured youth, gave him first aid, and then with the aid of John Sunlighter, a farmer who had arrived after taking a longer and safer way into the valley, started carrying him.

Other rescuers overtook them and made a stretcher from a clothesline and a coat. He was taken to a local hospital. His condition was critical, his injuries aggravated by shock and exposure.

Stoll had been camping with Bruce Upton, 16. Yesterday evening they had started to climb the side of the cliff. Sixty feet up, Stoll fell. He lay face upward in the shallow waters of Cattaraugus creek. Upton scrambled down, dragged his companion to the creek bank and went for help. Stoll had lain unconscious for seven hours when Dr. Frank reached him.

SHERIFF RUSHES TO CRASH, FINDS ONE DEAD DRUNK

Sheriff Charles Radcliff was called from peaceful slumbers at 1 a. m. Saturday to hurry to Robtown, Scioto township, where a man was reported dead and another hurt in a wrecked automobile. He reached the scene of the "tragedy" and found Roy S. Fausnaugle, 33, of Jackson township, not dead, but "dead drunk". The sheriff is charging him with driving an automobile when intoxicated.

Charles Smith, 41, also of Jackson township and Fausnaugle's companion, will face intoxication charges.

Fausnaugle proved to be an accommodating fellow, choosing the roadway in front of the home of Justice of the Peace Harry Kilburger. Scioto township, where a man was reported dead and another hurt in a wrecked automobile. He reached the scene of the "tragedy" and found Roy S. Fausnaugle, 33, of Jackson township, not dead, but "dead drunk". The sheriff is charging him with driving an automobile when intoxicated.

Dr. R. S. Hosier, of Ashville, was called to the Kilburger home to treat Fausnaugle's injuries, the motorist having a cut ear and a bruised shoulder.

Chambers pleaded guilty and was taken to the county jail when he failed to pay. Costs amounted to $15.10. A Columbus man riding with Chambers was released without a charge being filed.

Mayor Cady has now attached fines on 20 motorists who have violated the drunken driving statute. The maximum of $500 was assessed James A. (Chris) Levissey, of New Holland, last Monday, the offense being Levissey's third. He was sent to the Cincinnati workhouse, too, for four months. Each of the persons sent before the mayor for drunken driving lost his operator's permit for a year.

TOM GALLATI JAILED

MARION, O., July 23.—(UP)—Thomas Gallati, 37, of Cleveland, under indictment on a first degree murder charge in connection with the gang slaying of Roy Marino, Youngstown underworld character, was taken into custody by police here today. Gallati was one of five men indicted after Marino was "taken for a ride" last Sept. 9. Solly Hart, Cleveland gangster, was convicted in Youngstown yesterday.

Missing Flier

DAVIS E. SMITH (above), of Malden, Mass., 46-year-old aviation enthusiast, loaded his plane at Detroit Airport with 373 gallons of gasoline, a collapsible boat, and took off for a "destination unknown." Nothing has been heard from Smith since the take-off, June 29.

HUNDREDS FLEE FOREST FLAMES

One Town Ordered Evacuated And Two Others Stand In Path Of Fire

COURTNEY, B. C., July 23.—(UP)—Four hundred residents of Bevan prepared today to evacuate as authorities warned that a forest fire, which already had burned through 130 square miles of timberland, would reach the town within 18 hours.

The towns of Courtney and Cumberland also were in the path of the fire.

A train of empty freight cars was sent to Bevan to carry out the residents and their belongings.

Fire fighters escorted 50 families to safety from the community of Black Creek. Camp Three of the Comax Lumber company was abandoned.

The fire has destroyed millions of dollars worth of standing and cut timber and farm and town property. The more than 1,000 men engaged in fighting it were driven (Continued on Page Eight)

MERCHANTS TO HOLD MEET ON ROAD BUILDING

Retail merchants have been called to attend a meeting Monday at 7:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce rooms with several important matters to be discussed. George G. Griffith, president of the retailers association, sent letters to all members urging them to attend.

Possible closing of Route 22, west of Circleville, during the time the federal highway is being rebuilt will be considered. The association will discuss the uptown parking situation and the approaching camp meeting of Churches of Christ in Christian Union.

Mr. Griffith urges a good attendance since the matters to be discussed are important to all merchants.

GIRL LIVES AFTER NEEDLE IS REMOVED FROM HEART

HICKORY, N. C., July 23.—(UP)—Olema Cody, 10-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Cody was given a "good chance" to recover today after surgeons had removed a needle from her heart in a delicate operation at a hospital here.

The girl was playing with her brother when a sewing needle she had pinned in her dress accidentally was jabbed into her heart.

GOVERNOR OF NEW MEXICO IN CHARGE OF HUNT

Grave Fears Are Felt For Kentuckians Missing Several Days

AUTOMOBILE ABANDONED

State's Chief Executive Organizing Poses For Minute Search

SANTA FE, N. M., July 23.—(UP)—Gov. Clyde Tingley took personal command today of a search for three missing women, one of them a member of the faculty of the University of Kentucky, who disappeared in the Malpai badlands in northwestern New Mexico early this week. Grave fears were held for them.

Gov. Tingley left for the badlands accompanied by 11 state policemen. He will organize poses for a minute search of the area where a number of tourists have disappeared within the last few years.

The missing women were: Mrs. W. A. De LaForest, Lexington, Ky., an instructor at the University of Kentucky.

Miss Irene Piedalue, 45, Winchester, Ky., extension worker at the University of Kentucky.

Miss Laura Piedalue, 47, also of Winchester, a social worker for Catholic charities in New York.

Missing Since Tuesday

The women, missing since Tuesday, were en route to Billings, Mont., to be the Summer guests of Mrs. Philip Gibbons, wife of a hardware salesman and sister of the Piedalue women.

Mrs. Gibbons said today she had received a postcard from the women Friday, mailed Tuesday from Albuquerque, N. M., saying that they expected to be in Billings next week. The card was signed by Irene Piedalue.

The first indication that the women might have lost their way in the rugged mountain region came Tuesday, when Martin Craig, of Albuquerque, noticed their car on the side of the road. When it still was parked there the next day, he notified police who found that it contained the women's traveling bags, pocketbooks, cigarettes, bits of food, and other personal belongings. Local authorities searched for them until last night when they notified Gov. Tingley and asked for assistance.

Governor Gives Assurance

Gov. Tingley telephoned Mrs. Gibbons at Billings last night and assured her that everything possible would be done to find the women.

Nearby are subterranean passages under lava beds whose walls are coated with ice. Known as the ice caves, they are visited by hundreds of tourists annually. Authorities said it was impossible that the women had lost their way in them, that they were entirely too small for such a thing to have happened.

Local authorities had searched the area, including the caves, thoroughly yesterday and when (Continued on Page Eight)

WILLIAM DIXON BECOMES CHIEF OF OHIO RELIEF

COLUMBUS, July 23.—(UP)—Administration of relief in Ohio today was in the hands of William C. Dixon, Cleveland attorney, appointed by Governor Davey.

The appointment, effective at once, runs until next April. The salary is $400 a month.

Together with state auditor Joseph Ferguson, Dixon will oversee administration of relief in the various counties. The auditor will make pre-audits of the expenditures of the local relief units and investigate the eligibility of relief clients.

Dixon will supervise the program, set up uniform systems for handling applications and distributions of funds. Upon his request the auditor may withhold funds from any counties which fail to carry out the instructions of the new administration.

BOSTON RED SOX MOVE INTO STRIKING DISTANCE OF TOP POSITION

INDIANS FALL BEFORE DRIVE OF CLIMBERS

Pirates Increase Nat Lead And Reds Split Pair With Philadelphia

NEW YORK, July 23—(UP)—The torrid battle between New York and Cleveland for first place in the American league has almost obscured the steady plugging of the Boston Red Sox, who were only 2½ games from the top perch today.

Baseball followers, so familiar with the Sox's mid-season collapses, have paid little attention to Joe Cronin's men since they blew an early season lead, then fell from second to third. Surprisingly enough, they dropped no further and since July 4, their steady playing has cut the distance to first place by two games despite the red-hot pace set by the Indians and Yankees.

The Sox have compiled no sensational winning streaks to call attention to their steady playing, but since Independence Day when they were 4½ games out of the lead, they have won 11 out of 14 games. They hadn't won more than three in a row until yesterday when they beat the second-place Cleveland Indians for their fourth straight.

The score was 7-4, and cut the Indians margin over the Red Sox to 1½ games. Jack Wilson, who hadn't won a game since June 17, was touched for 10 hits, but he pitched tight ball in the pinches to win his eighth game. He left nine Indians on the basepaths. The Red Sox pounced on three Cleveland hurlers for 12 hits, and Bob Feller, who was reached for three runs in the third inning, was charged with the loss, his fifth of the year.

The Indians loss increased New York's lead to a full game as the Yankee-Chicago White Sox game was rained out. Detroit at Philadelphia also had to be postponed because of rain. In the only other American league game, the St. Louis Browns took a 9-7 decision from the Washington Senators in a free-hitting affair.

The Pittsburgh Pirates increased their national league lead over the New York Giants to two games when they nosed the Boston Bees 4-3. The winning run was scored on Cucinello's fumble in the eighth. Cy Blanton held the Bees to seven hits, including Vince DiMaggio's ninth inning homer, to score his seventh victory. The win increased the Bees' lead by ½ game as the Giants scheduled game against the Chicago Cubs was rained out. Cincinnati and Philadelphia divided a double-header, the Reds taking the first 5-2 behind Paul Derringer's effective pitching, and the Phils scoring 11-10 in the nightcap after finally choking off Cincinnati's seven run rally in the eighth. Wally Berger hit a homer in each game or the Reds.

The St. Louis Cards supported Lon Warneke's seven hit hurling with a 15-hit attack that crushed the Brooklyn Dodgers 12-3. Mize, Padgett and Bremer closed Card homers. Medwick batted in five runs with a triple, double and single.

STAGEHAND AND MENOW READY FOR BIG BATTLE

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill., July 23—(UP)—Stagehand and Menow, no respecters of champions but just a couple of horses who can run when the heavy sugar is on the line, were expected to stage one of the year's thrilling horse races today in the $30,000 Arlington classic before a throng of nearly 50,000.

Six other 3-year olds were entered overnight in the tenth Arlington classic over the mile and a quarter distance, but the betting gentry and the plain horse lovers forecast a two-horse race between Stagehand, owned by Maxwell Hande, and trained by Earl Sande, and Menow, owned by Hal Price Headley.

Stagehand is the leading money-winner of the 1938 season and conqueror of the mighty Seabiscuit in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap last winter in California. Menow is the conqueror of War Admiral in the $50,000 Massachusetts handicap recently at Suffolk Downs.

Thus the huge throng which jams into Arlington park today will see the two conquerors of those highly-ballyhooed champions, Seabiscuit and War Admiral, match strides in a race which has produced such great winners as Blue Larkspur, Gallant Fox (ridden by Sande), Cavalcade, Omaha, and Granville.

Hartnett, New Cub Boss, Nearly Ended Career by Wild Throw in Training

In 1925... leading league in home runs.

By WALTER L. JOHNS
"BOYS, THERE'S A catcher!" That statement fell from the lips of Bill Killefer, Chicago Cubs manager, in 1922, in Chicago. And it concerned a rookie catcher, Charles Leo Hartnett, better known as "Gabby", and now, 17 years later, manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Hartnett was a greenie up from Worcester in the Eastern league. A greenie, perhaps, but a loud-mouthed, talkative one.

The Cubs catcher at the time had to sit on the bench because of an injury and Manager Killefer decided to give young Leo, then 22 years old, a chance to show his minor league stuff.

And how he showed it can be adjudged by the statement Killefer made to other players a few days later, the one we started this piece out with.

Killefer Gave Him Chance
Manager Killefer was taking a chance on Hartnett, for the young fellow had no experience except in the Eastern league. He had batted a slight 264 in 100 games, and had made 19 errors behind the plate. But Hartnett had shown during the Spring training season on Catalina island that he wasn't going to take a back seat. He spouted profusely, telling one and all about himself. He seemed to have a way with other Cub players, too, despite the fact he was a greenie. The nickname "Gabby" was tacked onto him at that time by one of the baseball writers.

Owens a lifetime batting mark of .300.

Hartnett, today a great catcher and handler of pitchers, was born in Woonsocket, R. I., in December, 1900. He attended Dean academy for a little over a year and then quit. He soon popped into the minor league spotlight, playing with Worcester.

Played Semi-Pro Ball
Prior to attending Dean academy, the Irish lad played on a local team. At Dean he also played, being the star catcher. Before going to Worcester in the Eastern league he played semi-pro baseball around Boston.

As a semi-pro player, Gabby attracted the attention of minor league scouts, who liked his hitting and catching and his enthusiastic chatter.

In his first year with the Cubs, Gabby participated in only 31 games. His batting average was very low, but he exhibited a throwing arm that turned Manager Killefer's head and Gabby was kept on the club. The following year, Gabby hit .268 in 85 games, also playing a short while at first base. He has been playing regularly ever since, with the exception of 1929, when, because of his own over-eagerness, he almost lost that great right arm.

Arm Goes Dead
It was the first day at the training camp. Gabby, cutting up for the newcomers, attempted to blast a fielder off the second-base bag, whipping the ball down with a bullet-like peg. The result: his arm went dead. The whole season he spent nursing the arm, being able to participate in only 25 games as a pinch hitter. He did appear three times in the world series in the same role, but he failed to do any good.

Gabby's arm came through in good order with rest, however, and, in 1930, he came back with the greatest year of his career, catching 141 games and batting the ball for a .339 average. To add to his hefty batting average, the talkative one slammed 37 home runs and batted in 122 runs, his best in 16 years in the majors.

The new Cub manager has a 16-year lifetime batting mark of .300, and had banner years in 1935 and in 1937, besides the big season in 1930. In 1935, Gabby led all Chicago swatters with a mighty .344 mark, giving him third place among the league's batsmen. He was the spearhead of the Cubs' drive to the pennant.

Gabby Is Big Man
Besides topping the National league receivers for the fourth straight year, Gabby enjoyed a whale of a season last year. He swatted for a mark of .354 in 110 games.

Continual chatter... that's why they call him Gabby.

In his 16 years in the majors as a player, Gabby has caught 1,704 games. Add to this more than 50 games this year. He has caught 100 or more games for 12 years, eight of which were consecutive.

Gabby is 38, has brown hair, gray eyes and is graying at the temples. He is a big man, weighing 190 pounds, and standing over six feet. He is married and lives in Chicago. In the off seasons he has sold real estate and insurance.

This season Gabby has served the Cubs as coach besides player. His shrewdness and knowledge of the game, his likable personality, plus his brilliant 16 years in the majors, all with the Cubs, won for him the job of manager.

Members of the Pickaway county Farmer's and Sportsman's association had completed distribution, Friday, of more than 460 pheasants through all of the county's 15 townships. Not more than five birds were left on any one farm.

The sportsmen were assisted by Game Protectors Fred Harlowe, of Newark, and Clarence Francis, of Circleville.

All the pheasants were hatched and raised on the B. S. Millar farm, near South Bloomfield, in pens belonging to the association.

TWO TON TONY FIGHTS FOR LIFE IN HOSPITAL

Galento Whisked From Camp To Oxygen Tent And Fight Is Postponed

ORANGE, N. J., July 23—(UP)—Whisked from training camp to oxygen tent, Tony Galento, the National Boxing association's No. 1 challenger for the world's heavyweight title, fought for his life in Orange memorial hospital today.

Galento, who was scheduled to meet light heavyweight champion John Henry Lewis in Philadelphia next Tuesday night in the most important fight of his career, wheezed for breath that was being choked off by pneumonia. His fight with Lewis was postponed indefinitely.

Ordered To Hospital
Dr. Joseph Higi, personal physician of the rotund, beady-eyed Galento, conferred with a New York lung specialist after ordering Tony to the hospital last night and announced that his patient's condition "was very serious, but he has a fighting chance."

The Orange, tavern-keeper, described as a throwback to John L. Sullivan, became ill suddenly Wednesday night when he returned home after going through his training routine at Madame Bey's camp in Summit. His wife called Dr. Higi Friday morning.

When the physician found his temperature at 105, he ordered Tony to bed, and when his condition failed to improve he moved the fighter to the hospital. The move was made with approval of Dr. L. H. Jacobs of the Pennsylvania Athletic commission. No one was allowed to see Galento except his wife.

Second Postponement
It was the second time the Galento-Lewis fight has been postponed. It originally was scheduled for Philadelphia's municipal stadium on July 13, but Promoter Herman (Mugsy) Taylor changed the date to the 26th to allow Tony more time to train. The fight had been expected to draw a gate of between $100,000 and $150,000, and would have been Galento's biggest money bout, as well as the most important of his ring career.

A victory most certainly would have meant a big September fight for him with either ex-champion Maxie Baer, or the present titleholder, Joe Louis. He had appeared in fine spirits at Madame Bey's Thursday, and confidently predicted he would score his sixth straight knockout of the year.

Galento thought he had nothing more than a slight cold before he called Dr. Higi, who immediately diagnosed the illness as "influenza pneumonia." When his temperature failed to drop below 104.4 last night, Dr. Higi ordered the oxygen tent. At that time the boxer's respiration was 32 and his pulse 120. The last hospital bulletin this morning said his condition was "fair."

MUDHENS PLACE HIGH HOPES ON LAABS' HITTING

COLUMBUS, July 23—(UP)—A stocky 24 year old outfielder who recently was sent back to the minors for additional seasoning today threatened to propel the Toledo Mudhens into the American Association pennant race with his powerful hitting.

"Chet" Laabs was returned to Toledo a few weeks ago by the Detroit Tigers and since he joined the club the Mudhens have been traveling at a fast clip.

It was Laabs who provided the spark for Toledo's double triumph yesterday over Minneapolis. The Mudhens won the first game of the twin bill 8 to 4 and took the second 7 to 1.

Laabs secured two hits in four trips to the plate in the opener and drove in three runs. In the second contest he homered with a man on base to account for two markers.

Toledo is 9½ games out of first place, but still a threat because of the manner in which the Association leaders have been cutting one another down.

St. Paul climbed back into undisputed possession of first place in the race when it took a double-header from the floundering Columbus Red Birds 8 to 7 and 3 to 2. Columbus was off to a seven run lead in the opener, but feeble pitching by Al Fischer and Mike Ryba could not protect it.

Young Yank Terry limited Kansas City to three hits as Louisville beat the Blues 2 to 1.

The Indianapolis - Milwaukee game was rained out.

FEEDS EKE OUT 3-2 VICTORY OVER GLITTS

Eshelman Group Takes Early Lead When Butler Hits First Ball For Homer

Eshelman Feeds eked out a 3-2 victory over the Glitt food market, Friday evening, in one of the most interesting recreation ball league games played this season. Neither team was able to connect solidly for many base blows, neither committed many errors although two by the Glitt outfit helped the Feeds to victory, and both clubs played heads-up ball.

The Feeds scored first when Butler, first man to the plate in the opening inning, smacked out a home run. The Feeds were handicuffed from that point until the fifth frame when they chased one marker over the rubber and came back in the sixth with the final and deciding tally.

The Glitt lads scored once in the third and went ahead 2-1 in the fourth, but couldn't hold their edge.

The winners gathered only four hits while the losers connected for five. Leasure was on the hill for the Feeds and Lutz, a newcomer, tossed the ball for the grocers.

There will be several exhibition games on the W. Mound street field Sunday afternoon starting at 2 o'clock.

BOB FELLER ON TRICKY SKIDS AFTER BLOW-UP

BOSTON, Mass., July 23—(UP)—Bob Feller, the husky Iowa schoolboy who rocketed to fame less than two years ago through the medium of a blazing fast ball, today was on baseball's tricky skids and with him were sliding the pennant hopes of the Cleveland Indians.

Living up to expectations and fulfilling the rosy promises made for him, Feller pitched great ball for the first one-third of the current campaign and his hurling kept the Indians on top in the tight American league race.

For the past month however, Feller has been just another pitcher and not a very good one at that. Since June 28 he has turned in only one victory for the Tribe and over that four week stretch has finished only a single encounter that he has started.

With a chance to go into a tie for first place with the idle New York Yankees yesterday, Manager Oscar Vitt sent Feller to the mound against the Boston Red Sox. The youngster lasted only three innings, during which he was nipped for five hits and four runs.

With a 2 to 1 lead going into the third inning Feller blew up. A single, a walk and successive doubles by "Pinky" Higgins and Bobby Doerr gave the Red Sox three runs and established a lead the Tribe was never able to overcome.

Cleveland scored single counters in the fourth and seventh runs, but Boston pushed across a run in the sixth off Denny Galehouse and two more in the eighth at the expense of Johnny Humphries.

Jack Wilson, always tough for Cleveland, was touched for 10 hits, but kept them well distributed. The victory was Wilson's eighth of the season and three of those triumphs have been over the Indians.

YESTERDAY'S HERO: Hugh Mulcahy, whose hitless relief hurling, halted a Cincinnati rally after seven runs had been scored, and saved a game for the hapless Phillies.

Following God's Plan

God punished Israel's idolatry by bringing upon them seven years of oppression by the Midianites. Then Gideon was called to deliver them and he began by destroying the idols of his own father.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Judges 6:1-8:35

Gideon asked as a sign that God wanted his service, that a fleece be wet with dew and the ground be dry. In the morning Gideon wrung a bowl of water from the fleece upon the dry ground.

Thirty-two thousand men responded to Gideon's call to arms. But they were indifferent and all but 10,000 went home. Watching them drink at a brook, God selected 300 of these as truly in earnest.

Equipped only with trumpets and pitchers containing lamps, Gideon's men attacked the hosts of Midian who fled in terror, destroying themselves. (GOLDEN TEXT—Joshua 1:9.)

Five Points Christian
The Rev. F. G. Strickland of the Five Points Christian church will preach Sunday at 10:30 a. m. on "Rural Life at the Jordan".

AFTER God's deliverance of the children of Israel under Deborah and Barak, the land had rest from its enemies for 4 years. But the people again forgot God and went away into the sin of idolatry. And so we read for the fourth time that sickening round of sin, punishment and deliverance of which there are seven cycles in this book of Judges: "The children of Israel did evil in the sight of the Lord; and the Lord delivered them into the hand of Midian seven years."

Gideon's Call
So fierce was the oppression of the Midianites that the Israelites fled to the hills and hid themselves in dens and caves, and even so courageous a spirit as Gideon is found by the angel of the Lord hiding away in an obscure place trying to thresh a bit of grain he has rescued from his country's oppressors as the messenger of God came to commission him to throw off the yoke of oppression, saying, "The Lord is with thee, thou mighty man of valor—Go in this thy might, and thou shalt save Israel from the hand of the Midianites; have not I sent thee?" At first his modest soul demurred, pleading his own unworthiness and the poverty and obscurity of his family. To reassure his own soul, Gideon demanded certain signs of God, and, receiving these tokens of God's presence and power he dedicated himself to the service of God and his country.

Gideon's Consecration
Gideon began his great work by "first sweeping the dirt from his own doorstep." His first act of deliverance was a stroke at the idolatry of his own father's house in demolishing the altar of Baal and cutting down the grove his father had erected as the center of idolatry in his own village. Thus he testified to his conviction that the nation's ills were fundamentally the result of its own sin and called for regeneration rather than revolution.

Sifting the Forces
Gideon's appeal to the nation's patriotism brought an immediate response of 32,000 men. But the Lord is not so easily impressed with statistics as we are. He saw the indifference of many that made up that host. So an easy way out was shown them and an opportunity offered them to save their lives and their families and 22,000 of the would-be patriots "beat it" for home and safety. Nine thousand seven hundred, who were just as cowardly were not so frank and needed the second test to sift them out with the chaff where they belonged. This was done by watching them drink water from a brook. Three hundred of Gideon's men were so keen for the fight for which they

Lamps, Pitchers and Trumpets
These three hundred, equipped only with trumpets and lamps in empty pitchers, which they broke at Gideon's signal, thus displaying their torches, gave the Midianites the impression of a vastly superior force and threw them into consternation in which they destroyed themselves and gave Gideon a signal victory. It was a victory of faith putting to flight the armies of the aliens. The same faith is still the victory that overcomes the world!

RISING TIDE

THE ebbing tide of business, according to evidence on all sides, has definitely turned. It is particularly noticeable in the industrial communities, which were harder hit than others by the latest slump. The most convincing proof is the growing re-employment. Steel, textiles, shoes, glass, automobiles and accessories, building, all show it. There is no rush back to work, but a steady trickle almost everywhere. It is the first upward turn in nearly a year.

This is especially convincing because June and July are usually months of business decline. When activity can rise against normal summer stagnation, and in the face of a congressional election involving issues that businessmen generally have been viewing with alarm, there must be some force at work more powerful than weather, politics and business precedent combined.

Government spending, no doubt, has something to do with it, but can hardly be the dominant factor, because millions of Americans regard this spending itself with an alarm which tends to offset its potency as a stimulant.

There is every reason to believe now that, barring unforeseen developments in the four vital areas of business, labor, politics and foreign affairs, things will be humming in the fall.

HARMONIZING STATE LAWS

THE public needs to know more about the work of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. Composed of three members from each state, this group, year after year, studies the great mass of statutes with the purpose of sifting out those which conflict and drafting uniform laws on matters of more than local importance.

Among the laws studied at the current sessions of the conference are those on real estate mortgages, insurance regulation, survival of tort actions, death by wrongful act, house-trailer regulation and aeronautical codes. Marriage and divorce laws are also recognized as greatly needing uniformity, but they were omitted from the program because of the recognized difficulty of reconciling state differences at this time.

Alexander Armstrong, president of the Conference, opened the recent meeting with a strong plea for more action in putting over the body's recommendations. "We spend years in drafting acts," he said, "and then in many instances do nothing whatever to present them to the legislatures of our states and secure their adoption."

RING TO MRS. ICKES

WASHINGTON—Officials of the Interior Department are disappointed with Mrs. Harold Ickes. They had expected more cooperation.

While she and her husband were traveling through Europe on their recent honeymoon, Mr. Ickes' bureau chiefs congratulated themselves and gloated over the fact that hereafter their telephones would not ring as early as 8 a. m. or as late as 6 p. m. with the operator's curt warning, "Secretary Ickes calling."

Mrs. Ickes, they felt sure, would now see to it that their boss and her husband would lead a more leisurely life.

Mrs. Ickes, however, has failed them. The Secretary of the Interior, long known as the hardest-working member of the Cabinet, still comes down at exactly 8 a. m., and expects others to be there at the same time. Because they start an hour early, they are supposed to get off an hour early, but since the boss remains at his office until 5 or 6, most of his bureau chiefs have to do likewise.

Mrs. Ickes has achieved one thing, however. She has succeeded in getting her husband to go out to lunch. It used to be a glass of milk and a sandwich at his desk. But now he takes an hour off at noon.

Occasionally also she stops at the Interior Department on the way to a shopping tour, peeks through a side door, and interrupts the Secretary of the Interior for a moment. Many of his subordinates would not dare beard the lion in his den. She not only gets away with it, but the Secretary of the Interior seems to like it.

MARRIED BLISS

In other respects Mrs. Ickes has been no disappointment. In fact, at a picnic given by Interior Department officials for the Ickes shortly after their return, she proved just the opposite.

Jane (her husband pronounces it "Jean") has auburn hair, delicate skin, an inclination toward freckles, a contagious smile and a charming sense of proprietorship over her husband.

Because Ickes looks far younger than he is, and because Jane acts somewhat older than she is, no one who had not read the papers would consider their ages very far out of line.

Mrs. Ickes seems to take real delight in mingling with people, and her husband, who never was very social, now is more companionable, better humored, and seems to get a real kick out of life.

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD MCCURDY WELCH

Written for CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST: Determined to show Dr. Julian Faige, the man she is in love with, that she can make her own way in the world, Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, burns her bridges behind her, moves to a rooming house and, for lack of anything better, obtains a job as a taxi dancer at the Peacock, run by Nick Luigi. She is living with a girl named Laurie Evans, whom she met in the park, and who is a cashier at the restaurant which Julian patronizes. Noel feels she is a dangerous rival in Ruth Chester, Julian's pretty nurse. During an outing in the country, Julian tells Noel he wants to kiss her but doesn't think he should. One evening at the Peacock, Luigi tries to kiss Noel. She slaps his face and threatens to quit. Noel gets a job in a laundry but loses it after three days because she doesn't work fast enough. Still dancing at the Peacock, Noel meets a young man named Chris Landers, whose refinement makes him stand out from the crowd. She has danced with there. Noel is told that Chris returns to the Peacock a week later. Leaving the Peacock one night, Noel is greatly embarrassed to find both Chris and Julian waiting for her.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 19
WHEN NOEL saw Julian standing at the entrance of the Peacock waiting for her, it seemed as if her heart leaped right up into her throat. For a moment she didn't know what to do or say. Chris was standing there, his eyes questioning. Finally, Noel gained control of herself, and presented him to Julian. Then she said, "I'm so sorry. You see I—hadn't any idea that Doctor Faige—"

"I quite understand," Chris said coolly, and moved away.

Then Noel's eyes found Julian's again. And she knew that Chris didn't matter. A thousand Chris Landers couldn't matter. Julian was here. He had cared enough to find her. Her heart was suddenly singing like a nightingale under the stars.

Julian was angry. Noel knew that. But even this fact could not overshadow her joy at seeing him again. The only thing of which she was really conscious at the moment was the fact that he was here after all the desert of the days that had passed.

Then she heard him speak, saying calmly, "I am sorry about your friend. Perhaps I'm the one who should give way."

"No—no, Julian," she said hurriedly.

He moved up then and took her arm. "Shall we go?"

At his touch, Noel was conscious of a rush of feeling which threatened almost to overwhelm her. Now that Julian had come, all of her worries had been quickly relegated to the background of her thoughts. Her hatred of this garish club, Nick's disapproving eyes, even the lack of hurt displeasure on Chris' boyish face—it was only tonight that she had tried to convince herself that in time she could care for Chris?

And then she and Julian were going out into the cool, star-sprinkled night. There wasn't a moon, but never had the stars shone with such brilliance.

There was Julian's shabby car parked under a street light. She recognized it with a little thrill.

Julian said nothing as he helped her into the seat. Even in the semi-darkness, Noel could see that his face had a pale, set expression. Was he really as angry as he seemed?

Noel managed a little laugh at last and said, "How did you know where to find me?"

"I waited, hoping you'd get in touch with me, as you had promised," Julian began. "Called you over the phone a number of times. You never called back so—"

Noel drew in her breath sharply. Suddenly her throat was aching dreadfully. Many times in her imagination she had pictured herself sitting here beside him in his shabby car. Julian smiling at her, his dark eyes seeking hers with warmth and something akin to tenderness. And now—

She was afraid he would never believe anything else but that she had deliberately lied to him as to where she was working and the nature of the work. He was like that. Everything to him was always simple. It had to be one way or the other. There were no deviations with Julian.

Of course she had permitted him

Julian had called her. A number of times he had said. Then there was only one thing that could have happened. Mrs. Blarson had forgotten to tell her. The rooming house keeper was getting more absent-minded all the time, or else she didn't care whether messages were delivered or not.

"When I didn't hear from you," Julian continued, "I did the only thing left for me to do. I asked Laurie where I could find you."

Julian's voice was controlled, but it had a cold, steely quality that frightened her a little. He was still angry, but she could see that he had himself well in hand. Would she ever be able to explain, to make him understand?

"Julian," she began timidly, "I—I hope—that is—" but she stopped because she couldn't think of just how she should begin the explanation.

His expression was so uncompromising. He looked so stern and—

"You see there—there are several things I want to explain," she managed to say at last.

"Yes?" Julian's voice came coolly. He did not look at her. Then, before she could find the courage to go on, he asked: "Where do you live? You'll have to tell me now since I'm taking you there."

She gave him the number on Court street in a voice that was a little shaky. She hadn't wanted Julian to see the rather down-at-heel place where she lived. It would only make him try harder than ever to persuade her to go back to her old life. And, too, she had a feeling of pride about it. This was the only place she had yet been able to afford on her earnings. And she had made such proud boasts.

Julian turned the car toward Court street. He drove smoothly and not too fast, and maintained a rigid silence. It was as if there were a stone wall between them, which she couldn't break through in order to reach him. The silence seemed to grow more and more ominous.

Finally she said in a voice that held a tiny note of desperation. "Julian, I can explain really. Please don't look like that."

"There isn't any explanation," he said coldly. "Facts have an odd way of speaking for themselves."

Noel drew a sharp breath, which was almost like a pain. It was going to be more difficult to explain, to win him over than she had expected, for she saw now that his attitude was absolutely unbending. He didn't appear as if he had any intention of listening to her much less believe in what she had to say. What could she do? What could she say? She had to think fast. She couldn't let him leave her in this angry, unyielding mood. And in a few minutes the car would be stopping.

Suddenly her throat was aching dreadfully. Many times in her imagination she had pictured herself sitting here beside him in his shabby car. Julian smiling at her, his dark eyes seeking hers with warmth and something akin to tenderness. And now—

She was afraid he would never believe anything else but that she had deliberately lied to him as to where she was working and the nature of the work. He was like that. Everything to him was always simple. It had to be one way or the other. There were no deviations with Julian.

Of course she had permitted him to have a misconception of things, but not because she had really wanted him to. Only because she had failed so miserably in getting the place she had wanted at the Garwoods, and was still hopeful and almost confident of getting another place similar to that one. It wasn't her fault that she had not been able to find another place like the one he had approved of. And she couldn't bear for him to know that so far, she had been almost a total loss at making her own living.

They were in front of the Court street house now. Julian stopped the car. Noel hesitated and did not get out immediately. In another minute he would be driving off with a curt goodnight, which probably meant goodbye as well. She couldn't bear it. She couldn't!

But to her surprise, when Julian stepped out to help her from the car, he did not get back in the seat. Instead, he took a small black bag from a compartment in the car. Then they were walking together toward the house.

"You're going in?" she asked, mystified.

"Yes."

"But Julian, I—that is—the landlady—" Noel was puzzled beyond words.

"You seem to be forgetting my profession. Your landlady or anybody else could have no possible objection to my going with you to your apartment or room or wherever it is that you live. You see, I'm going to have a look at your foot. I'm almost certain you have rubbed a bad blister on your heel."

"Oh!" Noel gasped. So he had noticed that. It was true she had been conscious of pain, but she thought it was because the shoes were too stiff.

"You were having such a happy time, you probably didn't even realize that one of your heels was blistered. I could tell the way you walked on it when we came out."

They had entered the room now. Julian didn't even glance around. He just sat down at her feet and said quietly, "Take off your sandal and stocking."

The obeyed. There was a blister, quite a large one.

Julian reached for a roll of medicated cotton and a small blue bottle containing some kind of antiseptic. In a few minutes he had her heel neatly bandaged.

"Now be careful and don't get an infection. There's always some danger, you know."

Laurie awoke and sat up in bed, her dark hair tousled about her small freckled face. "Is Noel sick? Anything wrong with her?"

Julian shook his head. "She'll be as good as new in the morning. No need to worry, Laurie."

Then he went over to Laurie and put his hand on her head. "You don't look any too perky yourself, young lady. Oh, you girls, if you will rip around all night—"

"Laurie never does that," Noel told him quickly.

Julian looked at her as if to say, "Well, I know you do," and then moved to the door with his bag.

Noel followed him out into the hall, limping a little. They faced each other on the porch. "So it was just a lark after all, wasn't it?" Julian said a little bitterly.

"No, Julian, honestly, it wasn't," Noel exclaimed. "But it was quite evident he didn't believe her, for he started walking on to the car, regardless of her little cry. 'Wait just a minute—please.'"

How Poison Oak Eczema Now Is Being Treated

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A HOPEFUL demonstration for many who have been exiled from the woods of summer by the presence of poison oak or poison ivy, was that of Dr. Arne E. Ingals of San Francisco at the American Medical association meeting last month.

Poison oak, like poison ivy, produces a resin in the process of growth which causes the skin eruption. Only a small proportion of people are sensitive to it, so it appears to be a form of allergy.

Poison oak is known only in our western states. Dr. Ingals had collected specimens of the bush in all different stages of the annual changes. It differs considerably from spring to fall, the leaves being reddish in the spring, then green, then turning a bright red in the fall. It may grow as a small bush, or in the form of a vine attain a height of 20 or 30 feet.

It is not necessary to touch the plant in order to get poisoned. The smoke from a wood fire on which poison oak branches have been thrown, if blown on the hands or face of a sensitive person, will cause the eruption. All parts of the plant contain the irritating resin, and it abounds in young twigs.

Best Treatment
In treatment, remember that the irritating substance is an oily resin and that it is best dissolved in alcohol. The severity of an attack of poisoning is dependent to a certain extent on the amount of resin left on the skin. At the first symptoms then, vigorous and repeated washings with soap and water, followed by cleansing of the skin with alcohol or ether, and then re-washing with soap and water, is imperative. Ether soap is also valuable. All sorts of soothing lotions or zinc oxide lotion. The watery lotions are better than the saline. If these are not available a baking soda paste can be made and smeared on the affected part.

It was in the department of prevention that Dr. Ingals' exhibit was the most noteworthy. An alcoholic extract of poison oak leaves is prepared. It can be taken by hypodermic dosage, or by mouth, or added to the bath water drop by drop. In these ways an immunity is built up, and exposure need not be feared again.

One man told me he was able to go camping comfortably for the first time in his life after using this extract by mouth. He went on a two weeks' trip in the woods and walked through poison oak and handled it without any harm. Before that, he said, even reading about it made him break out in a rash.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clending can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "The Prevention of Poisoning," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

double-breasted affair becomes a grim and ghostly messenger of a battle of the elements.

"It doesn't matter what day of the week or time of day I don the snappy linen suitings—rain is bound to happen. The other day there wasn't a cloud in the sky as I slipped into the snowy trousers, but by the time I was buttoning the coat it was raining cats and dogs."

"I really believe the clouds hide behind the sun until they spy me venturing forth in my new ice cream suit. 'Here comes Z. Dumbkopf, Esq., boys,' they shout, 'let's have some fun and pour it on him.'"

"Science should make a study of my suit. It is by far a much better rain-making device than the old-fashioned Sunday school picnic or the out-door church supper."

"How is my suit as a suit? Well, I really can't say—seeing I haven't had it on for a period longer than five minutes since I bought it. I don't care—I don't want to be morally responsible for a cloudburst or tidal wave."

SOME FOLK never seem to have any luck. Their vacation is slated for the last two weeks in September, when the fad for sunbath has run its course.

Ever since the announcement that a Mr. E. according to government statistics, has the shortest name in the country, Zadok

Local Women Describe
South American Tour

Miss Lucille Neuding and Miss Margaret Adkins of Circleville, who are enjoying a trip to South America, have written an interesting article telling of their impressions of places visited and telling of the incidents in the lives of the people which they noted during their travels. They have visited many islands and the different customs and people have interested them greatly. Their interesting word picture follows.

We have been watching the natives of Trinidad load 2400 tons of unrefined sugar on our ship. It also will be loaded with bananas, coffee, molasses and cocoa before we return.

Describe Cities Trinidad is the home of the famous Pitch Lake from which the United States gets its asphalt and a party of us are taking the 120 mile trip there tomorrow. On the way down we had a drive through cocoa, coffee and banana plantations. These all grow in the same fields. Trinidad and British Guiana are both inhabited by thousands of East Indians, many natives and few whites, there being just 2000 whites in Georgetown.

A typical street lined with houses cheaply made, built on stilts with Hindus squatting peacefully on the ground attired in a Ghandi garb. The women have gold rings in their noses and many have three gold rings in each ear. Their wealth is invested in the jewelry they wear.

In Georgetown, British Guiana, an interesting sight was the Hindu section where dozens of families lived in stable like homes in front of which ran the sewage canals in which we saw the children getting their daily showers. Women doing family washings and from which water was carried for household uses. Our guide told us that many of them were rich, having saved every penny made in sugar factories. Sugar cane, palms and bananas make up the roadside scenery in Georgetown. There also we drove through the famous Botanical Gardens and walked through the Stabroek market. Here one must disregard all the smells of fish, fresh meats hanging on rails, grains, animals for sale, etcetera. We decided that the smell of the hundreds of filthy natives made the most nauseating smell.

After U. S. Money Everyone is out for the "rich" American's money. Men, women and children all varying shades of brown or black begging for a penny or a cigarette. A penny is two cents in our money and on the first trip out in St. Kitts our sympathies were aroused and we emptied our purses although our driver insisted that we shouldn't. We took many pictures of the natives but they always expect anything from one penny to sixpence for the privilege.

In St. Kitts we visited a school in session, six teachers in one room. The teachers and pupils seemed very eager to sing for us and were very sociable. Thousands in all the islands still live in one-room thatched houses, built quite high for coolness, and work seems to be scarce. Dozens of row boats meet our ship at every harbor, some filled with boys who dive for pennies thrown down by passengers, some filled with singers and some bargaining to take us ashore. Most of the harbors aren't deep enough for our ship to dock. Filth and poverty seem to be accepted by all and very little is done by the British government to remedy existing conditions. One driver told us that in law courts the native hadn't a chance.

The approaches to the islands are extremely colorful. The gorgeous reds, yellows, whites and blues of the blossoms on the trees and the colorful red and yellow roofs on the houses together with the quaint architectural designs are quite a contrast to the slums seen when walking and driving through the towns and countryside. If we could transplant the beautiful tropical foliage and the cool sea breezes to Circleville, everything would be perfect.

Weather Ideal The weather, strange as it seems, is ideal here. The days are hot but not like Ohio heat. There is always a delightful sea breeze which at night gets almost too cool.

Most of the islands are of volcanic origin and are quite mountainous. We passed Martinique where Mt. Pelee is located and took pictures of the path, void of vegetation, where the lava came down and buried the city. At Montserrat we could see sulphur smoke belching from a crater which emptied in 1923. The town, there, was destroyed by hurricanes in 1935 and again in 1936. Ox-carts, burros, streetvenders selling mangoes and other tropical fruit are always in sight. Walking through the streets we usually have from ten to fifty children and women trotting along behind us out of curiosity and for a little excitement. Tossing them an occasional penny, they are content. The women carry large baskets on their heads filled with chickens, fruits, sugar cane, or old ginger-ale and coca cola bottles. These are

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

RHODODENDRONS and other broad-leaved evergreens suffer severely from drought during the hot days of July and August.

When the leaves of rhododendrons droop and curl as shown in the Garden-Graph, it is a sign they are suffering from lack of moisture. Often during an intense drought, brown scorched spots appear on the leaves.

A year around protective measure for rhododendrons and other broad-leaved evergreens is to keep an acid mulch over the soil about them. In summer this mulch will help to retain needed moisture for the plants.

A thorough soaking of water from a hose once a week is a better method of watering rhododendrons than a light sprinkling every day or two. Allow the hose to run long enough to soak the ground thoroughly several inches deep. As the growing season for rhododendrons follow the flowering period it is essential that the plants have plenty of water at that time.

Light, Easy-to-Prepare
Dishes Ideal In Summer

AS BEFITS the sizzling season, all these recipes are easy to make and are guaranteed to nourish without any strain on the digestive system.

For an excellent lunch or supper dish, beat six egg yolks until light-colored. Add teaspoon salt, cup soft, fresh cottage cheese and one-third cup milk. When well-blended, fold in the stiffly-beaten egg whites. Melt two or three tablespoons butter in a hot frying pan, pour in the omelette and cook very slowly until well puffed and slightly brown on the bottom. Place in a moderate oven for about five minutes to cook the top. Fold over and turn out on a hot platter and serve at once. Garnish with watercress. With a cold jellied soup, a salad and a dessert, you have a splendid meal for three.

For an easy-to-make and good-to-eat dessert, we offer this suggestion passed on by a reader. Boil two cups water and four cups granulated sugar for 10 minutes.

K and Q were cashed, leaving West with the high trump. A spade was played to the A, and after the K was taken a club was led to the A and the remaining spades cashed. Declarer lost two hearts and one diamond, making game.
Had West discarded on the second trick, instead of using his heart A to capture South's J, he would have made three heart tricks instead of two and would have set the hand. South also made a mistake by playing his honor. The heart 5 should have been played, which West would have won with the 7. He then would have been limited to two hearts.

I believe we're all human and have the same human traits and do the same things for the same reasons, but some people use fancier terms for it to make themselves sound high falutin'.
Not long ago in a fancy, exclusive ladies' club, they were discussing the reasons why women cry. One after the other they got up and said the reason they cried was to get something out of their systems. Finally a lady rose in the back and said "Girls, I think it's about time one of us was tellin' the truth about this thing. I don't cry to get things out of my system—I cry to get things out of my husband."

COURT RULING FOR EMPLOYER, SHOCKS N. L. R. B.

Judges Uphold Right To Discharge Men Who Seized Factory

BOARD SEES OTHERWISE

Attorney Voices Desire To Carry Case Before U. S. Supreme Bench

WASHINGTON, July 23—(UP)—Charles Fahy, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board said today that he would ask the board to appeal from a decision of the seventh U. S. circuit court of appeals at Chicago which voided a labor board finding in the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation case.

The court decided yesterday that since "an employer is justified in discharging employees who seize property against his will," the board erred in ordering the Fansteel company to reinstate 53 persons whom it had discharged for conducting a sit-down strike at its north Chicago plant 17 months ago.

"I hope the board will appeal the case to the supreme court because I think that it should," Fahy said. "This case involved only an unfair labor practice by the employer in which the circuit court opinion indicates that it agrees with the board."

In the majority court opinion, Justice Will M. Sparks said: "in this (the sit-down) they (the employees) violated the law which they now seek to enforce against the petitioner."

Justice Walter C. Lindley concurred. Justice Walter E. Treanor dissented.

Board Issues Order
The board had ordered the Fansteel company to reinstate discharged employees and to enter into bargaining with the Amalgamated Association of iron, steel and tin workers union of North America, a C. I. O. affiliate.

The union charged that the company refused to bargain collectively, that it hired an agent to spy upon the activities and membership of the union, and that it attempted to organize a company union and threatened to discharge all who did not join.

A labor board examiner's report found that the company was engaged in unfair labor practices. It was this report that ordered reinstatement of the discharged employees and collective bargaining with the union.

Order Thrown Out
The court's ruling threw out the entire board order, but it asserted that the "present employees still have their right to bargaining without interference of the petitioner (Fansteel) and this may be enforced upon proper procedure."

"There seems to be no denial by the board that there was ample cause for discharge," the majority opinion said. "Indeed in the argument before this court, the board admitted that the men in conducting a sit-down strike and resisting the officers 'did a foolish and illegal act.' Certainly it cannot be denied that an employer is warranted in discharging his employees, and severing that relationship, when they take and retain exclusive possession of his property against his will."

"The (striking) employees had a complete and adequate remedy without cost to them, at the hands of the board, by the use of which they would have lost nothing in time or wages, if their cause was just."

The court held that the employer had no such recourse.

Legal Remedy Spurned
"The employees, however, spurned this legal remedy, disregarding all laws on this subject, and essayed to settle the difficulty according to their own sense of right and justice and contrary to the better thought of those who really have at heart the best interests of all laborers."

"In this they violated the law which they now seek to enforce against the company."

"We are convinced that petitioner was warranted in discharging the employees, and we are compelled to so hold in order to avoid placing our approval upon such activities as they (the strikers) engaged in. To do otherwise would be an injustice not only to the employer, but to the unions and their friends who wish them well."

Espionage Denied
The court said it was convinced from a study of the evidence that the company did engage in espionage within the union and that it interfered with employees wishing to become members of the union.

"It may also be said that there is substantial evidence to support the finding that petitioner (company) contributed support to the organization of the rare metal workers of America, . . . in violation of the Federal interpretation of section 8 (of the labor act).

$710,000 VALUATION PLACED ON WHEAT CROP OF PICKAWAY COUNTY

GRAIN THRESHED FROM TOTAL OF 74,000 ACRES

Most of 1938 Production Is Harvested And Either Sold Or In Storage

SLIGHT DROP IN YIELD County Officials Receive No Information On Federal Grants On Crop

A wheat crop, estimated to be worth more than $710,000 to farmers of Pickaway county, is almost completely harvested. Sold for cash or stored in bins to await higher prices. Pickaway county farmers planted 74,300 acres of land for harvest this summer and the average yield is being estimated at about 16 bushels an acre.

The price for the 1938 crop is just a little more than half that offered a year ago, resulting in the farmer's cash return being down considerably. Some farmers are reported storing their wheat in anticipation of federal loans on the stored crop. To date, county A. A. headquarters has not received application blanks for loans or any other material that might open the way for loans.

Compared with last year the 1938 yield is a little less than the average, possibly two bushels an acre. There is not much choice in quality between the 1937 and 1938 crops. Rain did a little damage at harvest time in both years.

Prices fluctuate The 10-year average wheat yield in Pickaway county has been set at a little above 16 bushels an acre and records disclose that variations either up or down are few and never great. However, the fluctuation in market prices has led the farmer's return from year to year to cover a wide range.

Crop and economics experts at Ohio State university contended that the prospects of a large harvest throughout the nation accounted for the drop in prices. Prof. Edward Silver, of the O. S. U. agricultural engineering department, says that increased use of the combine harvesters has enabled farmers to reap the grain with less effort and fewer harvest hands. Combines cut, thresh and sack the grain in a single operation, eliminating the long-used threshing machines.

General reports indicate an average weight of 60 pounds a bushel in central Ohio although one Marion county farmer has a 63.5 pound average.

Elevators Busy All Pickaway county elevators have reported heavy business during the wheat season. Crews have been employed 24 hours daily to handle the flow of golden grain.

Farm leaders predict that the county will not be permitted to plant near as many acres for 1939 harvest as they did for this year. Ohio's total allotment under A. A. A. provisions is cut far below the number of acres used for the crop this year. State A. A. A. officials have not yet decided on the number of acres each county will be permitted.

KIDWELL DAMAGE SUIT SETTLED OUT OF COURT

The damage suit of Homer Kidwell against H. C. McPherson, filed on Feb. 15, 1937, was settled and dismissed at the cost of the defendant, Friday. An entry signed by Judge Meeker Terwilliger closed the case that had been fought through the Common Pleas court and into the Court of Appeals where a lower court judgment was reversed on error.

Kidwell filed suit for $954.99 against McPherson on Feb. 15, 1937 after an automobile accident on a county road. A Common Pleas jury gave the plaintiff a $679.60 judgment on Sept. 30, 1937. McPherson's attorneys appealed and won their fight before the district court.

The action was settled out of court following the reversal. Both men live in western Pickaway county.

GOVERNOR OF NEW MEXICO IN CHARGE OF HUNT

The circumstances were similar to those surrounding the disappearance two years ago of Mr. and Mrs. George N. Lorus of East St. Louis, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heberer of Duquoin, Ill.

Traveling west by automobile, they disappeared without a trace in the same badlands. Their automobile was found, travelers checks issued in their name were cashed for weeks afterwards, but of them nothing whatsoever was ever found.

The bad lands adjoin those of western Texas where on April 3 the bodies of Mrs. Weston G. Frome and her daughter, Nancy, were found, a few miles off the highway. Their car had been found abandoned by the roadside a few days before. They had been beaten. Their slayer has never been found nor have the circumstances of their deaths been established.

AUTOISTS GIVEN WARNING ABOUT PARKING LIMIT

Mayor W. B. Cady warned motorists, Saturday, that the city's two hour parking limitation in the business district becomes effective again next Monday. "The law will be enforced to the letter," the mayor declared.

Enforcement of the ordinance follows an experiment by the mayor in which he had police check cars only on Saturday. "I tried to give merchants and everyone else a break by suspending enforcement of the ordinance on week days," Cady said, "but too many were taking advantage of our plan by parking all day and making customers of our stores find parking places wherever they could. Now all will have to observe the two hour limitation all days except Sundays and holidays."

Patrolman Fred Fitzpatrick, who checks the parked cars, has received instructions from the mayor to start at 9 a. m. Monday and to arrange his work so he can cover all points of the business district every two hours. The limitation ordinance was passed during the administration of ex-Mayor W. J. Graham. When Mr. Cady took office Jan. 1 he informed council that he would have the statute enforced on Saturdays only.

FILIPINOS FIND DAMAGE SLIGHT FROM VOLCANO

MANILA—(UP)—Mount Mayon, volcano near Legaspi, Albay, is gradually quieting down after its first big eruption in 10 years. Many residents of Legaspi and a dozen surrounding barrios have returned to their homes, swept out the ashes and expressed thanks their homes were not burned in lava.

Within two weeks after the volcano's sudden eruption the excitement was all over. There had been no casualties and the damage caused by smoke and ashes to nearby crops was not large.

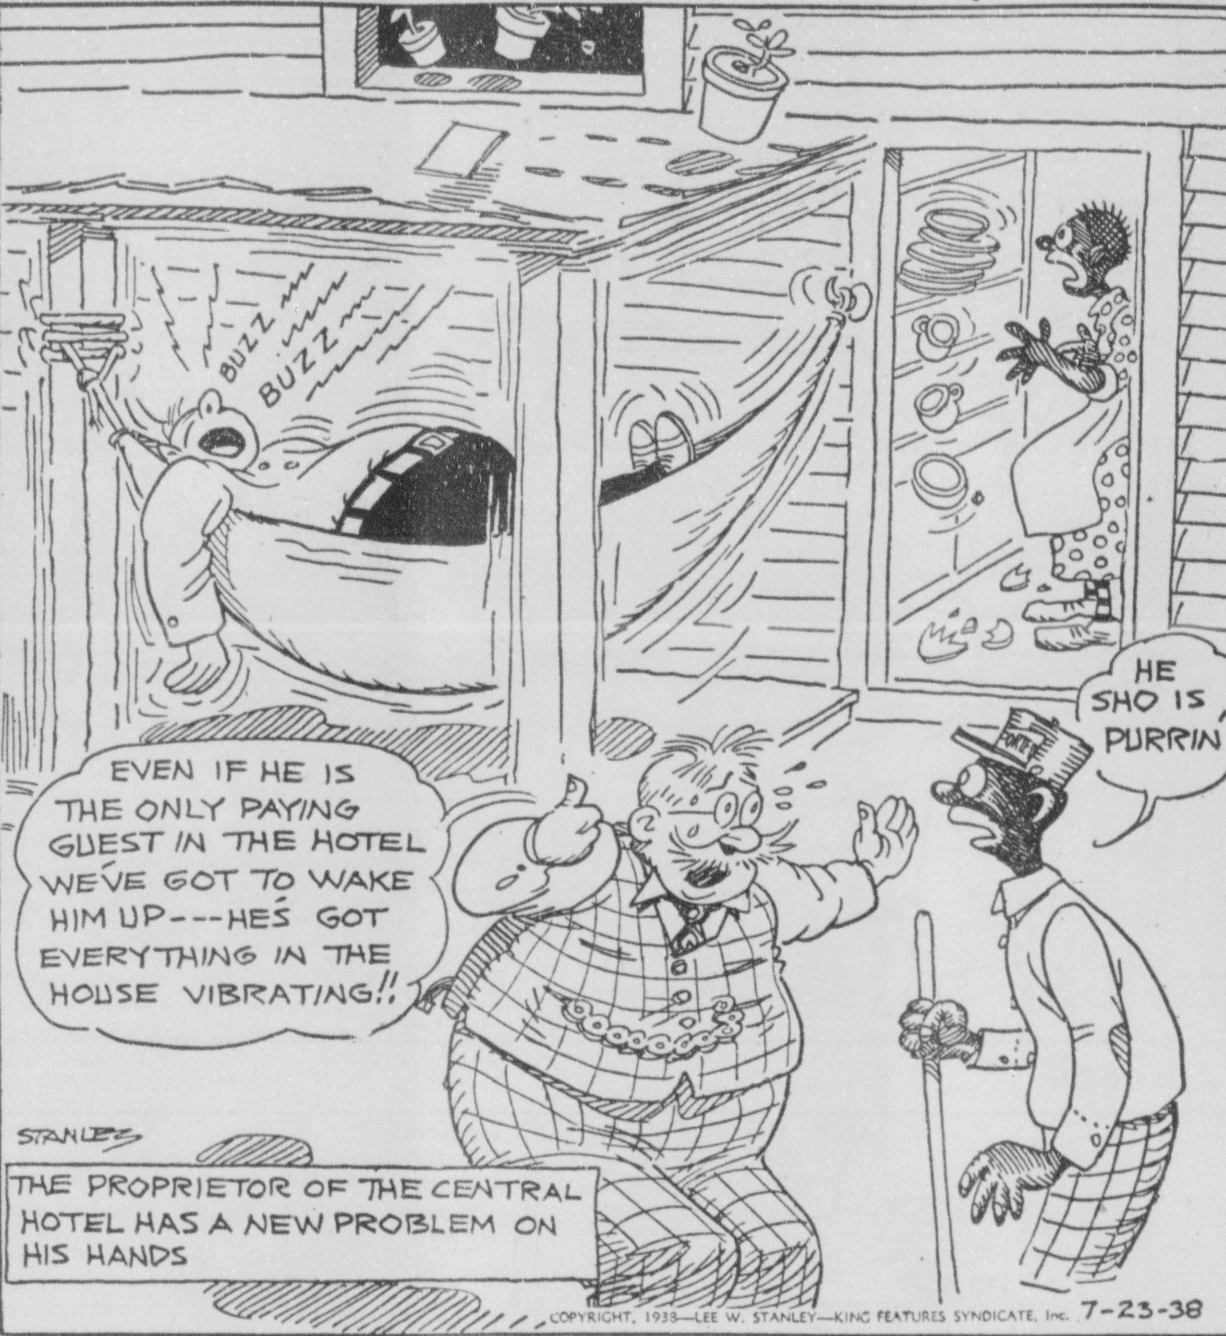

Excitement was momentarily renewed when smoke began coming from one side of the mountain, about one-third of the way up to the crater. However, this appeared to be only a "dying gasp" rather than the formation of a new crater as was at first believed.

Occupants of refugee camps were fairly good natured during the eruptions and among them spread the pleasant story that Mayon was merely an ageing woman who was removing the wrinkles from her face. The "wrinkles" were gullies on the volcano's slopes and they were being filled with lava. The almost-perfect cone was even more symmetrical after the eruptions were finished.

He reached in his pocket and pulled out his income tax—a nickel.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES, O. S. U. floriculturist

QUESTION: What is the best fertilizer for peonies and when should it be applied?

ANSWER: Despite the fact that many nurserymen and many writers still stick to the old-fashioned idea that bone meal is the only fertilizer, I would suggest that you use a more modern type of fertilizer, a complete commercial fertilizer with an analysis of 4 percent phosphorus, and 4 percent potash. This can be bought under various trade names or as a regular farm fertilizer. It is best applied in the early Spring but if you neglect to do it then, applications made now will benefit the plants for next year's bloom. Use two to three pounds per 10 square feet of soil surface. This late in the season, it would be well to work the fertilizer into the soil and apply water if possible to hasten its action in the soil. Ask your local county agricultural agent for a copy of our extension bulletin "The Flower Garden."

QUESTION: Which is better, to allow tulips to remain in the ground or take them out and store until fall?

ANSWER: Unless your tulips have multiplied to the extent that they need dividing, or unless you have ample labor to dig them out and heel them in some other place, I do not believe you will find there will be any advantage to digging them and storing them during the summer.

QUESTION: Will you please tell me how to eradicate bindweed from my garden? We have let it stand idle for several Summers. This season we plowed and disked it, let it stand until the weed was well started, and then disked it again. It does not seem to discourage it at all.

ANSWER: The principle of any weed control, with a weed such as bindweed, is to never allow the tops to develop at all. In this way, by cutting off the shoots of the roots is slowly used up until finally they die. If this is done consistently throughout one season it should be sufficient to eradicate. We also find that many of these weeds may be controlled by spraying with sodium chlorate, using eight ounces to a gallon of water and spraying it on. There is danger in this since this material makes clothing and shoe leather and wood highly inflammable when it dries. Only metal containers should be used, and rubber boots should be worn in applying this chemical. May I suggest that you write to the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station at Wooster and ask them for a copy of the bulletin, "Ohio Weeds." This will give you complete information on identification and control of the majority of the weeds.

QUESTION: What variety of hydrangea is it which has large white heads of blossoms and is in bloom now?

ANSWER: It is the Snow hydrangea, Hydrangea arborescens.

QUESTION: The leaves of my soft maple are turning yellowish brown and dropping off. Can you suggest any possible cause for this?

ANSWER: Although it is impossible to definitely identify your trouble without seeing a sample of the leaves, from the number of maples that I have seen the past few weeks, I imagine you have a very severe infestation of red spider, a tiny insect which you can barely with your eye, which is unusually numerous this year. It may be controlled by dusting or spraying with sulphur, being sure to apply it to the under surface of the leaves as well as the upper. If, however, you are

London And Paris Expected To Get Best Possible Terms For Minority

(Continued from Page One) there had been no mention of a German guarantee of neutrality for Czechoslovakia provided that she disarmed, or of an offer of a German-Russian non-aggression pact. These suggestions were avoided by Capt. Fritz Widemann, Hitler's adjutant, on his recent visit here, and they never had been considered, the source said.

Hitler was understood to have sent Chamberlain, by Widemann, an expression of his desire for a peaceful settlement of the Czechoslovakian problem and to have conveyed the thought that Great Britain might press France, and Britain and France together might press the Czechoslovak government, to make substantial concessions to its German minority.

There seemed considerable doubt, as the result of a thorough check of authoritative British and other sources here, that Hitler committed himself to any gigantic program of action which would alter the whole European situation.
